

TEAMMATE

All teachers need access to a high-quality, tailored personal and professional development plan that is aligned to their core values and purpose. Educators deserve the opportunity to center their needs and nourish their wellness and live a fulfilled life outside of the school setting. Teachers have a right to change their mind, change careers, think of themselves first and speak out about injustices. Teachers are humans first. But too many teachers – disproportionately BIPOC teachers and teachers with limited experiences – are getting a career that falls far short and their overall wellness suffers the most.

To help change these inequitable patterns and provide sustainable solutions for all teachers, we work alongside educators, advocates, and stakeholders to identify causes of the culture crash, lack of wellness support and inhumane expectations of teachers across the nation. We will lock arms, in partnership, to promote sustainable practices that will help retain teachers and create mentally well spaces, where thriving is the norm.
